Treasures In The Heavens:
some early christian insights into the organizing of worlds

HUGH NIBLEY

The canonical writings and the apocrypha have a good deal to say about "treasures in the heavens." If we compare the "treasures" passages in a wide sampling of these writings, including those of Qumran, Nag Hammadi and the Mandaens, it becomes apparent that "treasures in the heavens" is a part of a much larger picture, a "cosmist" view of the plan of salvation which was rejected by the official Christianity and Judaism that emerged triumphant in the fourth century but seems to have been prevalent throughout the Near East in an earlier period. There is no better approach to the study of this strange and intriguing doctrine than an examination of the Treasures in Heaven. We begin with the surprising fact that the Treasures in the Heavens were not allegorical but real.

That the life-giving treasures of earth, particularly the golden grain that was anciently kept in a sacred bin, really comes from the sky is apparent to everyone. The miracle of the bounties of heaven literally pouring from "the treasure-houses of the snow . . . the terrible storehouses" is an awesome sight and a joyous one. But without a benign intelligence to administer them, the same elements that bestow life on man can wreak frightful destruction; hence it is plain that a measure of knowledge, skill, and benevolence is necessary to convert the raw elements into useful gifts. Thus when one speaks of treasures in the heavens, one means not only the vast secret chambers of the rain, snow, and hail, but also the deep hidden wisdom and the power necessary to control them; God's treasury is a source not only of the elements that sustain life but also of the light and knowledge that endow them with that power.

The life-giving fusion of divine wisdom with primal element is often described in religious texts as a fountain, as "the overflowing waters which shine" coming from the "Treasure-chest of radiance" along with all the other shining treasures. "Thou hast established every fountain of light beside thee," says Baruch, "and the treasures of wisdom beneath thy throne hast thou prepared." The concept is more than a figure of speech; "the heavenly waters . . . important for life on earth," to be effectively used must be "gathered in and assigned . . . to particular treasure-houses." We are introduced to that physical part of the heavenly Treasure in a grandiose scene in which we behold a great Council in Heaven being held at the Creation of the World; there God, enthroned in the midst of his heavenly hosts, explains the Plan of Creation to them, and then opens his treasure-chest before them to show them the wondrous store of stuff that is to be used in making a world, but the new world is still in a preliminary state "like unripe fruit that does not know what it is to become." It is not until we get to the Doctors of the Church, wholly committed to the prevailing teachings of the schools, that we hear of Creation ex nihilo. Before then, Creation is depicted as a process of imposing form and order on chaotic matter: the world is created for the specific purpose of carrying out a specific Plan, and the Plan, like the Creation itself, requires strict organization—all creatures have their work assigned them in the coming world, to be carried out at predetermined times and places. When the Plan was announced to the assembled hosts, and the full scope and magnanimity of it dawned upon them, they burst into spontaneous shouts of joy and joined in a hymn of praise and thanksgiving, the Morning-song of Creation, which remains to this day the archetype of all hymns, the great acclamatio, the primordial nucleus of all liturgy.

The Creation drama, which is reflected in the great year-rites all over the ancient world, does not take place in a vacuum but "in the presence of God," seated in the midst of "His holy ones" with whom he takes counsel, they being his mind and mouth on the occasion as he is theirs. Though the Plan from first to last is entirely God's own, he discusses it with others, "consulting with the souls of the righteous before deciding to create the world," not because he needs their advice, but because the Plan concerns them and requires their maximum participation in it. The discussion was a lively one—apart from those rebellious angels who rejected it entirely, there was a general protest that the Plan would be too painful for some parties and too risky for all; it was the generous voluntary offering of the Son of God that settled the question. Those who embrace the Plan wholeheartedlly on this earth are the Elect, "the people of the Plan," chosen "from the foundation of the world"; they form on earth a community dedicated to "the faithful working out of God's Plan" in close cooperation with the heavenly hosts; they alone have access to the heavenly hidden Treasure, because they alone covet and seek it.

What most thrills the Psalmist of Qumran as he sings of the bounteous fountain of God's hidden treasures is the thought that he is not only a beneficiary of God's Plan, but was actually taken into His confidence in the making of it—he was there! When Clément of Alexandria recalls that "God knew us before the foundation of the world, and chose us for our faithfulness," he is attesting a well-known teaching of the early Church. The recurring phrase, "Blessed is he who was before he came into being," is not a paradox but refers to two states of being: if (following Baruch) "we have by no means been from the beginning what we are now," it does not follow that we did not exist, for it is equally true that "what we are now we shall not afterwards remain." We are dealing here not with existence and non-existence but with a passing from one state to another, sometimes explained as a passing from one type of visibility to another. It is common to speak of the Creation as a renewing, even as a reorganizing of old matter, nay as the building of a world from materials taken from the dismantling of older worlds. Pre-existent man had been around a long time before it was decided to create this earth: the whole thing was produced, when the time came, for his benefit; and though he was created last of all to take it over, "in his real nature he is older than any of it." He is the child of an earlier, spiritual birth or creation.

Nothing could be more gratifying to the ego or consoling to the afflicted spirit of mortals than the secret intimation of a glorious past and an exalted parentage. The exciting foster-parent illusion was exploited by the Gnostics for all it was worth, but the idea was no invention of theirs: it was the thought of his pre-existent glory that was Job's real comfort—"Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth... when the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy?" is not a rhetorical question. For it was the recollection of that same Creation-hymn of joy and their part in it that sustained the Sons of Light in the midst of terrible reverses. "If you could see your real image which came into being before you," says a Logion of Jesus, "then you would be willing to endure anything!" The author of the Thanksgiving Hymn is simply drunk with the idea of his own pre-existent glory. Such glory, according to the Johannine writings, belongs not only to the Lord but to all who follow him.

But why leave one's heavenly home for a dismal earthly one? To that question, constantly reiterated in the Mandaean writings, the Gnostic answer was that we were forced to make the move as a punishment; but the "Treasure" doctrine was the very opposite—we are here as a reward, enjoying an opportunity to achieve yet greater things by being tried and tested, "that each one might be promoted, according to his intelligence and the perfections of his way, or be retarded according to his wrong-doings." This is the well-known doctrine of the Two Ways: "For this reason the world has existed through the ages," says the Clementine Recognitions, "so that the spirits destined to come here might fulfill their number, and here make their choice between the upper and the lower worlds, both of which are represented here." In what has been regarded as the oldest ritual document in existence, the so-called Shabako Stone from Memphis we find the concept full-blown:

To him who doeth good will be given Life and (lit. of) Salvation (ḥtp). To him who doeth evil will be given the Death of the Condemned (criminal) ... according to that decree, conceived in the heart and brought forth by the tongue, which shall be the measure of all things.

The element of opposition necessary for such a test is provided by the Adversary, who in the beginning openly mocked God's Plan and set up his own plan in opposition to it. Being cast out of heaven with his followers by main force, he continues upon this earth during the set time allowed him by God's Plan (for the irony of his situation is that he is Mephistopheles, unwillingly if not unwittingly contributing to the operation of that Plan) attempting to wreck the whole enterprise by drawing off as many spirits and as much material as possible into his own camp. The Devil and his hosts claim the Treasure for their own and attempt to pirate the treasure-ships that cruise between the worlds, and use the loot in the outfitting of their own dark worlds. A neglected Leitmotif of the New Testament is the continuation on earth of the personal feud between the Lord and the Adversary begun at the foundation of the world: from the first each recognizes the other as his old opponent and rival; they are matched at every point—each claims identical gifts, ordinances, signs and wonders, each has his doctrine and his glory and his plan for the future of the race. Above all, each claims to possess the Treasure, the Lord promising Treasures in the heavens while the Adversary offers a clever, glittering earthly imitation: it is the choice between these treasures (for no man can have both) that is a man’s real test here upon the earth, determining his place hereafter. It is the “Poor” who recognize and seek the true treasures, since they who are “rich as to the things of this world” have deliberately chosen the fraudulent imitation.

In coming to earth each man leaves his particular treasure, or his share of the Treasure, behind him in heaven, safely kept in trust (“under God’s throne”) awaiting his return. One has here below the opportunity of enhancing one’s treasure in heaven by meritorious actions, and also the risk of losing it entirely by neglecting it in his search for earthly treasure. Hence the passionate appeals to men to remember their tremendous stake on the other side and “not to defraud themselves of the glory that awaits them” by seeking the things of the world. To make the “treasure” test a fair one, the two treasures are placed before us on an equal footing (the doctrine of the Two Ways), their two natures being mingled in exactly equal portions in every human being. To neutralize what would otherwise be the overpowering appeal of the heavenly treasure, the memory of its former glories has been erased from the mind of man, which is thus in a state of equilibrium, enjoying by “the ancient law of liberty” complete freedom to choose whatever it will. In this state, whatever choice is made represents the true heart and mind of the one who makes it. What conditions the Elect to make the right choice is no unfair advantage of instruction—for all men are aware of the issues involved—but a besetting nostalgia, a constant vague yearning for one’s distant Treasure and happy heavenly home. This theme, akin to the Platonic doctrine of anamnesis, runs through all the Apocrypha and Scriptures; it is beautifully expressed in the Hymn of the Pearl from the Acts of Thomas.

In this classic tale, a king’s son has come down to earth to find a pearl which he is to return to its heavenly depository; here below he becomes defiled with the things of the world until a Letter from Heaven, signed by all the Great and Mighty Ones, recalls to him his true heritage and his purpose in coming to earth, whereupon he casts off his earthly garments and with the pearl returns to the waiting arms of his loved ones in the royal courts on high and to his robe of glory that has been carefully kept for him in the Treasury. Our various “treasure” texts consistently refer to going to heaven as a return, a joyful homecoming, in which one follows the steps of Adam “back to the Treasury of Life from which he came forth.” A great deal is said about a garment that one changes in passing from one stage to another, the final garment of glory being often equated to the Treasure itself. This garment introduces us to the very important ritual aspect of the treasure story, for it is generally understood that one can return to one’s heavenly treasure only by the careful observance of certain rites and ordinances, which provide the means both of receiving instruction and demonstrating obedience. In the Mandæan economy the ordinances are the Treasure, the knowledge of the proper procedures being the very knowledge by which the elements are controlled and the spirit of man exalted. The other sectaries are hardly less concerned with ordinances, however, the paradox of Qumran being that a society which fled from the rites of the Temple at Jerusalem should become completely engrossed in yet more rites and ordinances once it was in the desert. Moreover, the most elaborate of all discourses on the initiatory rites are those of the Coptic Christians.

As teacher and administrator of the ordinances, the priest holds the key to "the treasure-house of divinity," in which "the merit accruing from ceremonial worship is accumulated." These ordinances, imported directly from that Treasury of Light to which they alone offer the means of return, are types of what is done above; through them "souls are led to the Treasury of Light . . . . Between us and the Great King of the Treasury of Light are many steps and veils," and it is only by "giving the proper replies to the Guardians" that one is able to approach and finally enter the Treasury of Light. The ordinances are most secret (they are usually called "mysteries"), and it is through their scrupulous observance that every man "puts his own treasure in order."

The archetype whom all must follow in the ordinances is Adam, whose true home is the "Treasury of Light," and who belongs with all his children "to the Father who existed from the beginning." The pre-existent Adam, "the Adam of Light," having descended to earth fell into a deep sleep from which he awoke with his mind erased like that of a little child. He was thus in a state to undergo impartial testing, but in his new helplessness he needed instruction. This was provided by a special emissary from the Treasury of Light, the "Sent One." The "Sent One" is often a commission of three, the "Three Great Men" who wakened Adam from his sleep and immediately set about teaching him what he should know and do in order to return to the House of Light from which he had come. The Sent One may be Michael, Gabriel, or the Lord himself, but whoever holds that office always has the same calling, namely to assist the souls of men to return to the Treasury of Light: when the Lord, as the supreme example of the Sent One, descends below to deliver the spirits that sit in darkness, they hail him as "Son of Glory, Son of Lights and of the Treasures." Always a stranger on earth, recognized only by the "Poor," the Sent One comes to bring a treasure, and indeed he is sometimes called the Treasure, for he alone brings the knowledge men must have to return to the Father of Lights. Letters sent from above to help men in their need—the prototype of those "Letters from Heaven" that have haunted Christian and Moslem society through the centuries—being directives or passports for getting to the Treasure-house if not written deeds to the Treasure itself (the Scriptures are rated as such) are themselves included among the treasures of heaven.

While a treasure is anything precious and hidden, the early Christian idea of what was precious differed noticeably from the abstract and allegorical "spiritual" treasures of the philosophizing churchmen of a later time. The Patristic writers, trained in the schools, are offended and annoyed by the way in which many Christians cling to the old literalism of the Early Church. When primitive Christians thought of a treasure it had to be something real and tangible; theirs was the tradition of the Jews before them, for whom the delights of the other world "though including spiritual and intellectual joys are most tangible delights of a completely pleasing physical and social environment." Much has been written about early Christian and Jewish concepts of time, but where the other world is concerned the ideas of space are at least equally important. With what care Luke tells us exactly where the angel stood in the Temple and exactly where on the map he found Mary! What tireless comings and goings and what constant concern with being in one place or another fill the pages of the Gospels! If we are not to think in terms of real time and place, why this persistent use of familiar words that suggest nothing else? Scholars have pointed out that it is impossible to take such formulaic expressions as "to visit the earth" and "he went and preached" (referring to the descensus) in any but the most literal sense.\textsuperscript{68} The insistence of our sources on depicting the hereafter in terms of "places" (topoi, the ma'ram of the Dead Sea Scrolls) is a constant reminder that "heaven is not only a state but a place."\textsuperscript{69} True, it is so far away that our Sun "and all the world of men" look like nothing but a tiny speck of dust, "because of the vast distance at which it is removed"; but for all that it is still the same universe, and all made of the same basic materials.\textsuperscript{70}

This preoccupation with locus assumes a plurality of worlds, and indeed in our "treasure" texts we often find "worlds," "earths," and "kosmoses" in the plural.\textsuperscript{71} It is only the Fallen Angels, in fact, led by the blind Samael, who insist: "We are alone and there is none beside us!"\textsuperscript{72} To the Sons of Light, on the other hand, there is opened up the grandiose vision of the "worlds" united in the common knowledge of Him who made them, exchanging joyful and affectionate messages as they "keep faith with one another" in the common Plan and "talk to each other . . . and establish concord, each contributing something of its own" to the common interest.\textsuperscript{73} The members of the vast complex are kept in perfect accord by the sustaining Word of God which reaches all alike, since it possesses "through the power of the Treasure" the capacity for traveling for unlimited distances with inexpressible speed.\textsuperscript{74} This Word is also the Son, who "has betaken himself to the numberless hidden worlds which have come to know him."\textsuperscript{75} The messages may also be borne by special messengers and inspectors, angels with special assignments and marvelous powers of getting around, who constantly go forth on their missions and return with their reports.\textsuperscript{76}

With all its perfect unity and harmony, the system presents a scene not of monotonous uniformity but rather of endless and delightful variety; "... they are all different from each other, and He has not made one of them superfluous; hence each one has good things to exchange with its neighbors."\textsuperscript{77} At a new creation there is a reshuffling of elements, like the rearranging of notes in the musical scale to make a new composition;\textsuperscript{78} it is even suggested, as we have noted, that old worlds may be dismantled to supply stuff for the making of newer and better ones.\textsuperscript{79}

Beginning with the very old Egyptian idea, recently examined by E. A. E. Reymond, that the creation of the world was really a re-creation by "transforming substances" that had already been used in the creation of other worlds,\textsuperscript{80} the Jewish and Christian apocryphal writers envisage a process by which the stuff of worlds is alternately organized into new stars and planets and when these have served their time, scrapped, decontaminated, and re-used in yet more new worlds. This "Urstoff" which is being constantly re-cycled is the Tohuwabohu of some Jewish teachers, according to Weiss, who saw the ultimate forms of matter in fire and ice.\textsuperscript{81} Likewise, according to the same authority, the world-holocaust of the Stoics was merely a necessary preparation for the making of new worlds from old materials.\textsuperscript{82} The whole thrust of Weiss' book is that until the early Christian Apologists we find no trace anywhere of a doctrine of creatio ex nihilo," the creation being everywhere conceived of as the act of organizing "matter unorganized" (amorphos hyle), bringing order from disorder, the basic prerequisites for the work being space (chora) and unorganized matter.4

And so we have in the Pistas Sophia, continuing the Egyptian teachings, the picture of a constant remixing (kerasomos) going on in the universe in which old, worn-out, contaminated substances, the refuse (sorm) of worn-out worlds and kingdoms (247-240), is first thrown out on the scrap-heap and returned to chaos as "dead" matter (134; 41.68), then melted down in a dissolving fire for many years (366), by which all the impurities are removed from it (249), and by which it is "improved" (Ch. 41, 68), and is ready to be "poured from one kind of body into another" (251). This whole process by which souls as well as substances are "thrown back into the mixing" (14), is under the supervision of Melchizedek, the great reprocessor, purifier, and preparer of worlds (33f.). He takes over the refuse of defunct worlds or souls (36), and under his supervision five great Archons process (lit. "knead"—ouoshm) it, separating out its different components, each one specializing in particular elements, which they thus recombine in unique and original combinations, so that no new world or soul is exactly like any other (338).

In this full-blown pleniary there is no waste and no shortage: "If any were superfluous or any lacking the whole body would suffer, for the worlds counterpoise one another like the elements of a single organism."45 The worlds go on forever: "They come and come and cease not, they ever increase and are multiplied, yet are not brought to an end nor do they decrease."46

It was essential to the Plan that all physical things should pass away; this idea is depicted by the ancient Egyptian symbol of the Uroboros, the serpent with his tail in his mouth, representing the frustration of material things or matter consuming itself by entropy.47 Indeed, the Pistas Sophia describes the Uroboros (which means "feeding on its own tail") in terms of the heat-death, when it reports that fire and ice are the end of all things, since ultimate heat and ultimate cold both mean an end to substance.48 Though matter is replaced through an endless cycle of creations and dissolution, only spirit retains conscious identity, so that strictly speaking "only progeny is immortal," each "mounting up from world to world" acquiring ever more "treasure" while "progressing towards His perfection which awaits them all."49 When the Apostles formed a prayer-circle, "all clothed in garments of white linen," Jesus, standing at the altar, began the prayer by facing the four directions and crying in an unknown tongue, "Iao, Iao, Iao!" The Pistas Sophia interprets the three letters of this word as signifying, (1) Iota, because the universe took form at the Creation; (2) Alpha, because in the normal course of things it will revert to its original state, alpha representing a cycle; (3) Omega, because the story is not going to end there, since all things are tending towards a higher perfection, "the perfection of the perfection of everything is going to happen"—that is "syntropy" (Pistas Sophia, 358).

The eternal process is thus not a static one, but requires endless expansion of the universe (p-sor ebol mpterf) (193 end, 219, 225, etc.), since each dispensation is outgoing, tending to separation and emanation, i.e., fissure (220), so that "an endless process in the Uncontainable fills the Boundless" (219). This is the Egyptian paradox of expanding circles of life which go on to fill the physical universe and then go on without end.50 Such a thing is possible because of a force which is primal and self-existent, having no dependence on other matter or its qualities. This is that "light-stream" which no power is able to hold down and no matter is able to control in any way (Pistis Sophia, 227). On the contrary, it is this light which imposes form and order on all else; it is the spark by which Melchizedek organizes new worlds (33); it is the light that purifies contaminated substances (388), and the light that enables dead matter to live (Ch. 65; 134). Reduced to its simplest form, creation is the action of light upon matter (hyle) (64); matter of itself has no power, being burnt-out energy (65), but light reactivates it (134); matter is incapable of changing itself—it has no desire to, and so light forces it into the re-cycling process where it can again work upon it—for light is the organizing principle (50). If Melchizedek is in charge of organizing worlds, it is Michael and Gabriel who direct the outpouring of light to those parts of chaos where it is needed (130). As light emanates out into space in all directions it does not weaken but mysteriously increases more and more, not stopping as long as there is a space to fill (129). In each world is a gathering of light ("synergy"?) and as each is the product of a drive towards expansion, each becomes a source of new expansion, "having its part in the expansion of the universe" (193 end).

The mere mechanics of the creation process as described in our "treasure" texts display truly remarkable scientific insight. For the making of a world the first requirements, we are told, are a segment of empty space, pure and unencumbered,84 and a supply of primordial matter to work with.85 Empty space and inert matter are, however, forbidding and profitless things in themselves, disturbing and even dangerous things for humans to be involved with—contemplating them, the mind is seized with vertigo until some foothold is found in the void.86 The order and stability of a foundation are achieved through the operation of a "Spark." The Spark is sometimes defined as "a small idea" that comes forth from God and makes all the difference between what lives and what does not: "Compared with it all the worlds are but as a shadow, since it is the Spark whose light moves all (material) things."87 It is the ultimate particle, the "ennas which came from the Father of those who are without beginning," emanating from the Treasure-house of Light from which all life and power is ultimately derived.88 Thanks to the vivifying and organizing power of the Spark, we find throughout the cosmos an infinity of dwelling-places (topoi), either occupied or awaiting tenants.89 These are colonized by migrants from previously established "toposes" or worlds, all going back ultimately to a single original center.90 The colonizing process is called "planting," and those spirits which bring their treasures to a new world are called "Plants," more rarely "seeds," of their father or "Planter" in another world.91 Every planting goes out from a Treasure-house, either as the essential material elements or as the colonizers themselves, who come from a sort of mustering-area called the "Treasure-house of Souls."92

With its "planting" completed, a new world is in business, a new Treasury has been established from which new Sparks may go forth in all directions to start the process anew in ever new spaces;93 God wants every man to "plant a planting," nay, "he has promised that those who keep his Law may also become creators of worlds."94 But keeping that Law requires following the divine pattern in every point; in taking the Treasure to a new world, the Sent One (who follows hard on the heels of the colonists) seeks nothing so much as complete identity with the One who sent him; hence, from first to last one mind alone dominates the whole boundless complex. Because each planting is completely dependent on its Treasure-house or home-base, the system never breaks up into independent systems; in this patriarchal order all remains forever identified with the Father from whom all ultimately come forth.

We on earth are not aware of all this because we comprehend only what we are like. Not only is God rendered invisible by the impenetrable veil of light that surrounds him, but he has purposely "placed veils between the worlds," that all treasures may be hid from those who do not seek them in the proper way. On the other side of the veil of the Temple lay "the secrets of heaven," the celestial spaces which know no bounds, and all that they contain. The wilon (veil) quarantines this polluted world mercifully from the rest. "Beyond the veil are the heavens," and that goes for other worlds as well as this one, for each is shut off by its veil, for there are aeons and veils and firmaments: "He made a veil for their worlds, surrounding them like a wall." Behind the ultimate veil sits Jeu, "the Father of the Treasury of Light" who is separated from all others by the veils (katapetasmata), a veil being that which separates that which is above from that which is below. When a cycle has been completed in the existence of things, "the Great Sabaoth the Good looks out," from behind the veil, and all that has gone before is dissolved and passes into oblivion. Only the qualified can pass by one of these veils, of course; when Pistis Sophia presumed to look behind the veil before she was ready, she promptly fell from her former glory. Only Jesus has passed through all the veils and all the degrees of glory and authority. As one grows in faith more and more is revealed, until finally "the Watchers move the veils aside and you enter into the Presence of the Father, who gives you His name and His seal...."

These veils seem to serve as protecting as well as confining fences around the worlds: The light of the Sun in its true nature (morphé) is not seen in this place, we are told, because it passes through "many veils and regions (topoi)" before reaching us; its protective function is represented by a wonderful super-bird, called "the guardian of the inhabited earth," because "by spreading out his wings he absorbs (dechetai) the fire-like (pyrimorphos) rays" of the Sun; "if he did not receive (absorb) them, the human race could not survive, nor any other form of life." On a wing of the bird is an inscription declaring, "Neither earth nor heaven begot me, but the wings of fire." Baruch was informed by an angel that this bird is the Phoenix, the Sun-bird which feeds on the manna of heaven and the dews of earth. It blocks the sun with its wings outspread, suggesting solar prominences or Zodiacal light. At any rate, it is an interesting example of how the ancients explained things which most men cannot see or comprehend in terms of things which they can.

The Plan calls for universal participation in the accumulation of Treasure in a course of eternal progression. The "Treasures in the Heavens" is heady stuff; E. L. Cherbonnier has observed that the discovery that man really belongs to the same family as God, "to share in the same kind of existence which God himself enjoys," is "like learning that one has won the sweepstakes." The Evangelium is good news—the only good news, in fact, since all else ends in nothing. But it is also news, the sort of thing, as C. S. Lewis points out, that no human being could possibly have invented. Granted that the Treasures in the Heavens are something totally alien to human experience, something which “eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man,” they must be none the less real.⑩ “For the plan of Salvation,” as E. Soggin has recently put it, “only exists when we are dealing with reality, not with artificial contrivances . . . as Hesse notes, ‘We are only interested in what really took place, all the rest being of little or no concern whatever.’”⑪ Likewise the religion of Egypt “n’est pas une mystique, mais une physique” as we are now discovering.⑫ This attitude, diametrically opposite to that of Christian and Jewish scholars (e.g., C. Schmidt) in the past, is gaining ground today. The old literalism has been dismissed as Gnostic, and indeed much of the appeal of Gnosticism lay in its exploitation of certain “cosmist” aspects of early Christian teaching; but the basic teachings of Gnosticism and Neoplatonism were spiritualized concepts which followed the prevailing line of the schools and ran directly counter to the old literalism of the Treasures in Heaven.⑬

While our sources contain “extremely confused and contradictory records of creation,” all seem to betray “a single organic foundation.”⑭ And while the relationship between them all still remains to be established, it becomes clearer every day that there was a relationship.⑮ The cosmist” idea is not the monopoly of any group, Gnostic or otherwise. Indeed, cosmism was essentially anti-Gnostic.⑯ The Doctors of the Christians and the Jews who adopted the Neoplatonic and Gnostic ideas of the schools opposed the old literalism with all their might, so that to this day cosmism has remained the very essence of heresy.⑰ Still, the very Fathers who opposed the old teaching admitted that it was the original faith of the saints, and they could not rid themselves of it without a real struggle.⑱

In view of its age, its universality, its consistency, and its scientific and aesthetic appeal, the doctrine of the Treasures in the Heavens should be studied more closely than it has been. What we have presented in intensely concentrated form is enough to show that references to treasures in religious writings may well conceal far more than a mere figure of speech.

NOTES

① We have treated this theme in “Sparisons,” Classical Journal, 40 (1945), 515-43.

② Secrets of Enoch, v.11, cf. vii.2; Jerem. li:16; Ps. cxxxv:17; Job xxxviii:22; I Enoch, xviii:11; Slavonic Enoch (in J. A. T. Robinson, Apocrypha Anecdata [Cambridge, 1807], II, viii); Pseudo-Philo, xxxii:17 (in M. R. James, Antiquities of Philo [SPCK, 1917], 176). “Clouds of radiance drip moisture and life,” Psalms of Thomas, 122 (A. Adam, in ZNTW, Beih. No. 24, 1939, 2); text in A Manichean Psalm-book (Stuttgart, 1919), 203-238. On the heavens as a general storehouse and treasure-house, K. Ahrens, in ZMDG, 84 (1930), 163, discussing Koran, xv:23; cf. Ben Sirach, xliii:14ff; In the Enuma Elish, Tab. viii:8, God’s “treasure is the abundance which is poured out over all.” On the relevance of this source, see W. Bousser, Hauptprobleme der Gnosis (Götttingen, 1907), 246.

③ They are “for a blessing or a curse as the Lord of Spirits willeth,” I Enoch, lx:1ff.; lx:22. They must undergo a transformation to be useful to man: Deut. xxviii:22; I Enoch, xviii:2; and lx:35, 21-22; Ill Baruch, x:9-10. They may serve “against the day of battle and war,” Job xxxviii:23, for unless benignly restrained they are dark and destructive, J. A. T. Robinson, Apocrypha Anecdata, viii, citing Testament of Levi, iii:2; cf. Od. Sal., xvi:16; Pseudo-Philo, xv:5.

④ “I am the Treasure of Life who descended upon the King of Glory, so that he was radiant in his understanding,” M. Lidzbarski, Das Johannesbuch der Mandäer (Giessen, 1907), 205, No. 57. God holds the keys to control and administer the treasure, K. Ahrens, in ZMDG, 84, (1930), 163; he restrains the elements as by a dam, I Enoch, lx:1ff., keeping them “sealed up,”
Dialogue

Pseudo-Philos., viii.6-10, in places of peace and order, I Baruch, iii.15. His treasury is a shrine of wisdom. Jerem. I:16-17; cf. Pindar, Olymp. vii.4-ff., 109. For the Mandaean "treasure" means "capability, ability, worthiness," E. S. Drower, The Thousand and Twelve Questions (Berlin: Akad.-Verlag, 1956), 137; n. 8. An impressive treatment of the theme is in the Thanksgiving Hymns (IQH), especially 1 (Plate 35), 5 (Pl. 37), 10ff. (Pl. 44d), 13 (Pl. 47).

6Quotation is from E. S. Drower, A Pair of Nasoraean Commentaries (Leiden: Brill, 1956), 69, n. 1. Cf. II Baruch, liv.13: Od. Sal., iv.8. The treasure is a fountain. Proverbs viii.24: "He has multitude of waters in the heavens . . . ." Jerem. ii.16. The source of all earthly treasure is a pool in heaven. II Baruch, x.3:10. The "treasures of glory" are the clouds and earthly fountains, says the Battle Scroll (IQM), x.12, the latter being fed by the former, Pseudo-Philos., xix.10, cf. N. Sed, "Une cosmologie juive du haut moyen-âge," in Recueil des Etudes Juives, 124 (1964), 64-5. In the treasuries of the heavens are the "living waters," I Enoch, xviii:2: "blessings pour from the holy dwelling and the eternal fountain that never deceives," IQSB 1:3 (this is also temple imagery, I Enoch, xxxix:15). God's creative intelligence is "a strong fountain," IQH 1:21; Pindar, Olymp. i.1ff.; ii.65ff.; ix.10, and Aeschylus, Persians, 234, 1022, equate the life-giving gold and silver of the divine treasure-house of oracular wisdom with golden grain and silver fountains. The light of the treasure is also a stream, Pistis Sophia, 65 (132ff.). The creative process is an ever-flowing Jordan of Light, Ginza, 67 (M. Lidzbarski, Ginza [Göttingen, 1925], 62ff.).

7II Baruch, liv.13:4.

8Such a scene is depicted in the archaic text of the so-called Shabako Stone, K. Sethe, Das 'Denkmal Memphischter Theologie', der Schabakosstein des Br. Museums (Leipzig, 1928), 23-32, 60-70, in the Pyramidal Texts, e.g., #468 (605); and Coffin Texts, e.g., #39 (166-67); in Enuma Elish, Tab. iii. 132-38; iv; vi. On the general Near Eastern background of the Council in Heaven, see F. M. Cross, in JNES, 12 (1953), 274-77; H. W. Robinson, in Jnl. Theol. Stud. 45 (1944), 251-57. On the presentation of the Plan, see J. Fichter, in ZATW, 63 (1953), 16-53. The scene is presented in the Serekh Scroll (IQS), xii.1ff.; Ben Sirach, xvii:11f.; Pastor Hermas, Vision 15; The 102 Questions (Drower), 112.

9Thus in the Shabako Stone (see note 8) as rendered by J. Breasted, The Development of Religion and Thought in Ancient Egypt (London, 1912), 46; "Then he assembled all the gods and their kais (saying to them): 'Come ye and take possession of the 'Meb-towe,' the divine store-house . . . whence is furnished the "Life of the Two Lands."" " Cf. Pindar, Pyth., x.15: "Come to the hidden Melian treasury of the golden tripods . . . the storhouse of true counsels, where the host of heroes assembles." Cf. Jerem. x.12; J Ezra viii:26; Ben Sirach, xxxix: 22-27; IQH, 1:20, 12:1ff.; IQS, x.6-2; Od. Sal. xv and xvi; xix.12ff.; Acts of Thomas, c. 136 (A. F. J. Klijn, The Acts of Thomas [Leiden: Brill, 1962], 137); Psalms of Thomas, 17-24; cii.13ff.; the Second Gnostic Work, 59a (C. Schmidt, in Texts u. Unterrichtungen, 8 [1892], 254, 301). At the Great Council in Heaven the Son said to the Father: "If it please Thee . . . speak, open Thy treasury, and take therefrom a boon," the boon being the plan of salvation, Prayerbook of the Mandaeans, No. 550, in E. S. Drower, The Canonical Prayerbook of the Mandaeans (Leiden: Brill, 1958), 66 (the scene is also described, ibid., 225 (No. 318), 227 (No. 123), 235 (No. 358, cf. 356-60), 269 (No. 375), 271ff. (No. 376). There is a dramatic description of the opening of the chest in the Alma Rishaia Zuta, iii.10ff. (in Drower, Nasoraean Commentaries, 60). So Ginza (Lidzbarski), 493. There are five treasuries of the senses; when the mind (enthymesis) wants to create, it opens the appropriate treasure-chest to get the things it needs, Manichaenische Handschriften der staatl. Museen Berlin (Stuttgart, 1940), I, 189-40, the things being the elements in an unformed state, ib. 54. Though they were later compendiated by mixture with a lower state of matter or ground-substance, the physical elements are in themselves pure and holy, ib., 239; in their corrupt earthly form they are gold, silver, copper, lead, and tin, ib., 33. God also opens a treasure-chest to bring forth healing elements for man, Manichaenae Psalmb-bool, II, 46.

10Gospel of Truth (M. Mallinse, et. al., Evangelium Veritatis [Zürich, 1956], fol. XIVV, 5-7. Smoke, fire, wind, and water were the chaotic contents of the divine Store-house, Manichaenae Psalmb-bool, II, 9. In the Ginza, 259, there is a leavening substance, a "Sauerteig der Welt," kept in the divine Treasure-house, and from this the world and the planets were created, as higher worlds are created of a like substance, 262. God furnishes "the whole creation" from "the 14The idea is carried over into the widespread ritual dramatizations of the Creation, the essence of which is the strict regulation of persons, times, and places. S. Movickel, Religion und Kultus (Göttingen, 1953), 53-9. See esp. Pistoia Sophia 128-135.

15This is an unifying part of the picture: the Hallelujah chorus with its refrain of "Forever and ever!" is the closing section of almost any ritual text. See W. F. Otto, Die Musen und der göttlichen Ursprung des Singens und Sagens (Düsseldorf-Köln: E. Diederich, 1956); H. Nibley, "The Expanding Gospel," B.Y.U. Studies, 7 (1965), 5-27.

16K. Koch, in Zeitschr. f. Theol. u. Kirche, 62 (1965), 271, 281-82, shows that the "creative word of God" originally refers to a conversation with others. The Egyptian concept is discussed by H. Junker, Die Götterlehre von Memphis (Berlin Akad. d. Wiss., 1940), 361, 42, 35; the holy ones are "as it were extensions of the Great God," H. Grapow, Das 27. Kapitel des Aegyptischen Totenbuches (Berlin, 1912), 40. See above, notes 8 and 9. May not the Logos of John I also be a "council" "discussion"?

17Quotation from D. Winston, in History of Religions, 5 (1966), 212, citing Jewish and Persian sources. It was a real discussion, in which many divergent views were expressed, as described in Timothy Abb of Alexandria, Discourse on Abbaton, fol. 10a-12a (E. A. W. Budge, Coptic Martyrologies, Br. Mus., 1921, 232-34); Ginzl (Lidzbarski), 331-35; Mandaeum Prayer-book, No. 361 (Drower, 255); alma Rishia Zuta, iii, 215ff (67, 70); alma Rishia Rba, iv, 250ff (7); Pistoia Sophia, 35ff.

18IQM, xii:2-3; ISQa, i:2ff. The world was created on their behalf, Ascension of Moses, i:12; 4 Ezra ix:13. All the elect were known and the kingdom of "the riches of his glory" (i.e. the treasure) appointed to them "from the foundation of the world," Matt. xxv.34, 42; Rom. ix:13; Od. Sal., xxiii:1-5; Psalms of Solomon, xviii:30; Didache, x:3; Test. Dom. nostri J. Christi, xxiv (J. E. Rahmani, ed., Mainz, 1899). They are the Pearls in the Treasure-house of Life, Ginzl, 590ff. They alone share the secrets of the treasure, ibid., 296. Cf. IQH, xvii:9.

19IQM, xiii:2; vii:6; xv:13; ISQa, ii:6f; x:4, 20; IQH, iii:2ff. Every major event in the N. T. is marked by the presence on the scene of heavenly beings participating with the saints in the activities.

21IQH, i:21; II:7, 13, 17; iii:10ff; iv:27; v:23; IX:10-11; X:26-30; XI:4-10, 22; xi:11; xii:18ff; xv:21ff. Cf. IQS, x:12ff; ix:16-18; Isaiah xli:5; Matt. xii:2ff; Rom. xii:33, 22; Eph., iii:4ff; Col. ii:16; Phil. iv:19; I Enoch, ibii:3; Ep. Barnab., vi; Od. Sal., vi:2; xxix:3; Gospel of Truth, fol. XVlr, 27; Test. Dom. nostri J. Christi, x:2ii (Rahmani, 1953); Ben Sira, xviii:13-15; Manichaean Psalm-book, II, 120, 126. "In a certain way, election is pre-existence," writes J. Zandee, in Numin, 11 (1964), 46, citing Logion No. 49 of the Gospel of Thomas. Not only the Son of Man but Isaac, Jacob, Jeremiah, the Twelve Apostles, Peter, etc., are specifically said to have been chosen and set apart in the pre-existence.

23The expression occurs in Gospel of Thomas, 84:17; Gospel of Philip, 112:10; cf. Secrets of Enoch, xxiii:14; IQH, i:19; xiii:8; Od. Sal., vii:10.

24II II Baruch, xxi:16. Cf. Gospel of Philip, 112:10: "For he who is both was and shall be." "By not yet existing, I do not mean that they do not exist at all ...." Gospel of Truth, fol. XIVr: 35-36. The formula "out of the eternities and into the eternities" is found in IQS, ii: line 1, and Ep. Barnab., xviii, and indicates an endless past as well as an endless future for man, "... for Thou didst establish them before eternity," IQH, xiii:8. "When he prepared the heavens I was there. Then I was by him, as one brought up with him; and I was his daily delight," Proverbs xiii:21ff; see H. Donner, in Aegypt. Zeitschr., 81 (1956), 8-18, for Egyptian parallels.
With a new creation things become visible on a new level, Secrets of Enoch, xxiv:5-xxv:11; xxv:3; xxx:10-12; LkV; II Baruch, li:8. This is consistent with the doctrine that one sees or comprehends only what one is like, see below, note 103. In the Genesis creation hymn, “everything is as it were created twice, in two different ways,” J. B. Bauer, in Theol. Zeitschr., 20 (1964), 7; Albright has shown that “in the beginning” does not refer to an absolute beginning but to the start of a new phase in a going concern, ib., 1. Ex ouk ontos refers to such a phase rather than to creation ex nihilo, W. Richter, in Biblische Zeitschr., NF 10 (1966), 97, citing 2 MacC. vii:28, and Harnnik. Clem., xix:4, p. 16, 18.

The concept of Gen. i and Psalms xciv and civ is the same as the old Egyptian idea that the Creation was the beginning of a new cycle of time following a different kind of age, K. Koch, Zeitschr. f. Theol. u. Kirche, 62 (1965), 257. At the Creation God showed his children “what they did not know before, creating new things and abolishing old agreements, to establish that which should be eternally,” IQH, xii:10-12; Ben Sirach, xxxvi: 6-8. Passing from one life to another is a renewal, IQH, xi:12ff; one’s existence does not begin with the womb, though a new life begins there, IQH, xv:13-15; Apocalypse of Adam, 78:1. When the “treasury of the heavenly King is opened” the saints become heirs to a new kingdom by a renewal of the mind, Acts of Thomas, Ch. 156. To become a Christian is to accept a new creation, Epist. to Diognetus, xi.

Below, note 79. The Egyptians taught that the renewal was the reuniting of existing things in new forms, R. Anthes, in Aegypt. Zeitschr., 82 (1957), 3. Untamed chaotic matter is represented as a raging beast, e.g., Pistis Sophia, 54 (104); 55 (105); when the beast is subdued an orderly world is composed of its substance, ib., 70 (154). Can this be the origin of the common tradition of creation from the body of some slain monster?

Clementine Recognitions, 1:44, 50 Ginz, 506, 508-10, 458. The spirits are equal in age, but not in power and glory, in which they compare as fathers to sons, without any rivalry or jealousy, Sophia Christi (ed. W. Till), 97ff.

Every man has a duname “likeness, counterpart, image,” which is the “spiritual or ideal counterpart or double. . . .” E. S. Drower, 102 Questions, 11; it is “the pre-existent pneumatic part of man,” ib., 122, n. 5, 161, 173, n. 3. Thus Paul (in the Apocalypse of Paul, viii:12ff) and Tobit (in an Aramaic text of Tobit from Qumran) both see their spiritual doubles. In the remarkable Vision of Kenaz in the Pseudo-Philo, xxviii:8, that early prophet sees the spirits of men walking about in another spirit-world while waiting for this world to be created. This is the Mandaean Ether-Earth, E. Drower, Prayerbook of the Mandaeans, 290, n. 4. Before the creation of the world “the soul still sat in the Kanna, without pain and without defect. . . .” Lidzbarski, Johannesbuch der Mandäer, 55 (No. 23). All creatures are double, Pastor Hermæ, II (Mand., viii.), 5, and all souls existed before the formation of the world, Secrets of Enoch, xxii:4. The related Platonic doctrine “became a prevailing dogma in later Judaism,” according to R. H. Charles, Apolocypha & Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament (Oxford, 1923), II, 444.

“God has shed upon man the splendor of his glory at the creation of all things,” IQH, xvii:9; vii:24ff; Secrets of Enoch, xxv:2, 5; xvii: 8b; Od. Sal., xxviii:14-15; xlii: xxiv:5; xxxvii:2-3; Gospel of Thomas, 90:2; Gospel of Philip, 212-22, 24f. The Nature of the Archons, 144:20 (in Theol. Literaturzeitung, 85 [1958], p. 668; Pastor Hermæ, Simil. I:1; Mandaean texts cited by R. Bultmann, “Die neuerschlossenen mandäischen u. manichäischen Quellen . . . .” ZNTW, 24 (1925), 108f. One is overawed by the thought that this thing of wet dust once “praised among the praying ones . . . was great among the mighty ones . . . .” IQS, xi:20-22; IQSa, iii, 28. To know one’s true identity is the great treasure, Gospel of Thomas, 80:26; 81:5; 87:7. “I am a Son and have come out of the Father. . . . descended from the pre-existing Father,” etc., Apolcyphon of James (ed. W. Till), 1:535, 15f.

Thus a fragment from Turfan, cited by Bultmann, 126: “I come from the light as one of the gods, and here I have become a stranger.” With characteristic vanity the Gnostics reserved such glory for themselves alone, Irenæus, ad loc. Hæreres, I, vi, cf. Od. Sal., 41:8, The Pearl, 21, 52-44, 56.

Job xxxviii:3-7, 23, this last is not stated as a question in the MT, but a flat declaration; IQM, xvii:20-27; “. . . peace was prepared for you before ever your war was,” and God will not take back the promises made at the creation, Od. Sal., iv:13-24.

Those who will go to heaven are they who came from there in the first place, John iii:13. They recognize the Lord on earth even as they once acclaimed him above, John xviii:8; xvii:20-12.
Treasures in the Heavens / 89

Justin Martyr, Apol., i:20, 59; ii:4-5, 7. So Zadokite Frg., ii:5-6. "When you lay your hand on the treasure the soul enters the scales that will test her," Alma Rishaia Rba (Drower), 44-46. Only when you have overcome here "is your name called out from the Book of Those Who Were Valiant, and you become the heir to our Kingdom ..." The Pearl, lines 46-48. For the reward aspect, Origen, De princ., I, viii, 4; II, ix, 6-8. Cf. Manichaean Psalm-book, II, 4, 58, on this "world of testing. . . ."

Clementine Recognitions, i:24.

K. Sethe, Dramatische Texte (Leipzig, 1928), I, 64-65.

A specific counter-plan is mentioned in Clementine Recognitions, iii:6; cf. IQM, xiii:4; IQS, ii:4f.; QFlor., i:8; Gospel of Philip, 123:1ff.; 103:24ff.; Apocryphon of John, 74:1ff.; 56:16ff.; 72:12ff.; Sophia Christi, 122:1ff. There are those in the Church who preach the doctrine of the Serpent, according to the Pseudo-Epistle of Paul to the Corinthians in Bodmer Papyrus, X:54:15, describing his ambitious opposition to God's plan in the beginning, ib., X:53:12-15.

When God sent forth a ship of light "laden with the riches of the Living," Satan and his pirate crew coming "I know not from where" seized "the treasure of the Mighty One" and "distributed it among their worlds" until they were forced to give it up, Psalms of Thomas, iii:1-15, 29-32, 33; Manichaean Psalm-book, ii:3, 163, 178; cf. the image of the three ships, ib., 168, 171, 174; Berlin Manich. HS., I, 50; Psalms of Thomas, xii:1-12. The Second Coptic Work, 148 (ed. C. Schmidt, in Texte u. Unters., VIII:123, 286) has Christ coming out of the monas of Sethesus "like a ship laden with all manner of precious things," so also the Manichaean Psalm-book, ii:11; in the Mand. Johannesbuch, No. 58 (206), a ship moves between the worlds bearing the glory of the Treasure of Life from one to the other. In the Egyptian Victory over Seth, 1:10-22, the god passes through dangerous straits in his ship while Seth and his robber band try to waylay him. (In the Book of the Dead the battle of the gods takes place on board a ship, H. Grapow, Das 37. Kapitel des Totenbuches, 57). When Adam returns to "the Terra Maris," he is asked by the guardians "what were he is bringing in his ship." J. Leipoldt, Religionsgeschichte des Orients (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1962), 86. In numerous Acts of Thomas the Captain of the ship or the rich merchant is Christ in disguise, e.g., A. Klijn, Acts of Thomas, ii-iii. The same commercial imagery of the ship in the Mand. Johannesbuch, No. 28, 82-86; cf. Ginza, 324. The seven planets are described as floating ships, Mandaeae Prayerbook, No. 286, 288; these seven try to rob man of his treasure, Psalm of Thomas, v:4 (in ZNTW, Beth., 24, 1925), 123. The 2012 Questions, 253, 258. The Ark itself was not a ship but a luminous cloud in space, according to the Apocryphon of John, 73:1f.

14 Apocryphon of James, iii:12ff. (the gifts); Apocryphon of Adam, 85:1ff. (ordinances); The 2012 Questions, ii:66, 86 (Drower, 226-27) (signs); These, ii:9f. (wonders); Bodmer Papyrus, X:54 (doctrine): Apocryphon of Elias, 1:8ff. (glory); they are even rival fishermen, Logion, No. 174, in M. Osnir et Palacios, "Logia et agraeha D. Jesu," Patro. Or., XIX, 574.

Hence the paradox that the "Poor" are the rich, Epist. to Diognetus, v: Manichaeae Psalm-book, II, 157. See below, note 45.

"Treasures now "prepared" and awaiting the righteous on the other side, Mark x:40; Gospel of Truth*, fol. XXIV, 11-17, can only be claimed by meeting certain stipulations, Gospel of Philip, 108ff. All treasures are held in trust, "dedicated," I Chron. xxvi:20; Pseudo-Philo, xxxix:3, and will be handed over when the time comes, I Enoch, xi:11. The righteous "without fear leave this world," because they have with God "a store of works preserved in treasures, II Baruch, xiv:12; xxiv:2. Whatever part of the Treasure we enjoy on earth is not ours but has only been entrusted to our keeping, The 202 Questions, I, 1; 111f; 132f. On the "treasury of good works" as "an old Oriental doctrine," K. Ahrens, in ZMDG, 84 (1930), 165. "One's good works are his deposit," says Ignatius, Epist. ad Polycarp, vi. The Christian (Manichaeans) and Chinese versions are compared by A. Adam, in J. Leipoldt, Religionsgeschichte des Orients, 109; for the Iranian version, D. Winston, in History of Religions, 5 (1966), 19f, who also mentions concealing the treasure under God's throne, 212, to which parallels are supplied by Il Baruch, liv:13, Ginza, 281: the Shabako Stone, line 61, and the Ark of the Covenant "under the feet of the statue of God," W. H. Irwin, in Revue Biblique, 72 (1965), 164. This is the theme of The Pearl.

*For the erasing of the memory, see below, note 60. The "Law of Liberty" (khēg kherut) of IQS, x:6, 12, is "the Ancient Law of Liberty" of Clementine Recognitions, ii: 25-25; iii:26, 59; iv:22, 34; x:12; cf. Minucius Felix, Octavius, xxviii; Cyril of Jerusalem, Catecheses iv:23f. (in Migne, P.G., xxv:481s). Having such freedom, the wicked have deliberately rejected God's plan. IQS, iv:25-26. Though the evil spirits are fiercely opposed to this liberty (Clementine Recognitions, ii:12) the "testing of election for every single individual" goes on without coercion in "truth, righteousness, humility, judgment," etc., while the self-willed are free "to go the way of their own heart . . . according to the plan of his own devising . . . . " IQS, v:3-5, the spirit being "immortal, rational and independent," Const. Apostol., vi:12; Tattian, Adv. Graecos, vii. The present test was appointed from the beginning, IQM, xiii:14f. "This is the condition of the contest which every man who is born on the earth must wage: if he be overcome, he shall suffer . . . if he be victorious, he shall receive what I said . . . ." 4 Ezra, vii:127, cf. IQH, xiv:23. It is a "testing-time in the common light," Sibylline Oracles, frg. 1:5, 18, 25-27. See further J. B. Bauer, in Theolog. Zeitschr., 20 (1964), 2-5.

A. Adam, "Die Psalmen des Thomas u. das Perlenleid," Beith 24 of ZNTW, 1959, 49-54. The Syriac text is given by G. Hoffman, in ZNTW, 4 (1903), 273-83, bearing the title, "Song of Judas Thomas the Apostle in the Land of India." Thomas's situation in India resembles that of the hero in the Land of Egypt. The pearl itself comes from the other world and is that part of the heavenly knowledge which is to be found here, Mand. Prayerbook, No. 253, 208f.; when it is taken away the world collapses, Ginza, 517; it is "the pure pearl which was transported from the treasures of Life, Mand. Prayerbook No. 69. The gobe of glory, left behind with the Treasure, is to be regained with it, Bartholomeus, "Book of the Resurrection of Christ," Fol. 18b (in E. A. W. Budge, Coptic Apocalypse, 208); Pistas Sophia, 6 (s.f.).

Leipoldt, Religionsgeschichte des Orients, 86; Abb. Timothy on Abbaton, Fol. 20b. The joyful homecoming is a conspicuous Egyptian theme from the beginning: There is rejoicing among the Great Ones for one of their own has returned, Pyramid Texts, No. 606 (1906); 217 (160); 222 (201); 212, 217, 68; Coffin Text (de Buck), ii, Spells 57, 272. The theme is discussed by H. Brunner, in Aegypt. Zeitschr., 80 (1955), 6; cf. Pindar, Olymp., viii:15. The righteous are homesick, 1 Enoch, xiv:4; xli:1ff.; Manichaeae Psalm-book, II, 197-200, 87. Going to heaven is a return, 4 Ezra, vii:78; John xvii:5f; iii:7-15; Rev. v:12. The saints desire "to be received back again" into "the first Church (that . . . existed from the beginning," before the creation, 11 Clem. Epist., xiv; Clementine Recognitions, ii:26; Test. Dom. nostri J. Chriisti, xxviii (64); Timothy on Abbaton, Fol. 20b: 12; Gospel of Philip, 115-18. The saints find the Kingdom because they came from there, Gospel of Thomas, 89:27; Pastor Hermæ, III (Simil. i, the Pearl
In reclaiming its treasure the spirit "becomes what it was before removing its gar ment," Apocryphon of James, ii:56:1-11ff.; cf. Gospel of Philip, 105:16; Gospel of Truth, fol. Xxiv, 24; Psalms of Thomas, ii:70:3, 74, 77; Acts of Thomas, vi-vii (lines 35-55 of The Pearl); Second Gnostic Work, 1:a; Ginza, 487, 261; Od. Sal., xi:10; Pastor Hermæ, III, Simil. viii. 2. The garment is the treasure for both men and angels, Ginza, 13; the garment of Adam and Eve "was like the Treasure of Life," ib., 245; it is a protection for the righteous which the evil ones try to seize and possess, ib. 247, 250, 259.

The garment represents ritual in general, C. Schmidt, in Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 347.

E. Drower, The 1012 Questions, 212, 241; the ordinances are "the treasures that transcend the world," ib., 245. "Ginza" means "a treasure, mystery, sacrament . . . what is hidden and precious . . ." ib. 12. As guardian of these secrets and mysteries the eldest Son is called "the Treasurer," Ginza, 150. The eldest are they who observe the ordinances secretly in this world, ib. 155-54, and their highest duty is to transmit and explain these rites to their children, Mand. Prayerbook, No. 372, 266. See S. A. Pallis, Mandææ Studies, 192.

Discussed by B. Gartner, The Temple and Community in Qumran and the New Testament (Cambridge Univ., 1965), 16f. The Temple with its rites is the earthy counterpart of the heavenly treasury, II Baruch, iv:3-5. Since the Creation the ordinances have been essential to God's plan, Jubilees, vi:18; Pseudo-Phil, xxi:12. It is in the cultus that the cosmic plan is unfolded, N. A. Dahl, in W. D. Davies and D. Daube, Background of the New Testament, 45ff., and the return of the Temple is the return of the heavenly order, Q Flor., i:vi.

I. I. and II. Jev and the 2nd Gnostic Work. Without the "mysteries" one has no power and no light, Pistis Sophia, 55 (107); this is a Haupthema of the Gospel of Philip, 124. The old temple rite of the shewbread is an initiation to the Treasury of Light, Pistis Sophia, iv:370. One's station (taxis) hereafter depends entirely on the mysteries one has "received" on earth, ib., 90 (201); 86 (195); 52 (50); Gospel of Philip, 125 (317); 129 (329). Without the performance of certain ordinances, no one, no matter how righteous, can enter into the Light, Pistis Sophia, 103 (265). Hence the rites are all-important, ib., 107, 11 (256), 260 (249). One becomes "an heir of the Treasure of Light by becoming perfect in all the mysteries . . ." II Jev, lxxvi:1; Apocryphon of John, liii:11ff.

K. Ahrens, in ZDMG, 84 (1930), 165; quotation is from D. Winston, History of Religions 5 (1966), 195, giving Jewish and Avestan sources; cf. IQS, x:14; ii:3; Secrets of Enoch, x:14f. At the fall of the Temple "the heavens shut up the treasure of the rain" and the priests "took the Keys of the Sanctuary and cast them into the height of heaven," II Baruch, xi:18. The key to the Mandææ kushta (initiation rites) is held by the Master of the Treasurehouse, Ginza, 420ff. So also in the Pistis Sophia, iv:376, the ordinances are "the keys to the Kingdom of Heaven." The keys which Christ gave to Peter were those to "the Heavenly Treasure," Epistola XII Apostolorum, Frg. 2, in Migne, P.O., II:147.

II Jev, lxxxiii (in T. U., VIII:211f.; the same image in Pistis Sophia, 14 (23). Cf. IQH, xvii:21: "God has chosen his elect . . . instructed him in the understanding of his mysteries so that he could not go astray . . . fortified by his secrets." Through definite ordinances one progresses in the community and helps others to progress, IQH, xiv:17-18, teaching of "the Creation and of the Treasures of Glory," IQM, x:21, and testing the knowledge of the members, IQM, xvii:8; IQM, xxx:22-26. In the Coptic works all the rites "serve a single aekonomía, i.e., the gathering in of the spirits who have received the mysteries, so that they can be sealed . . . and proceed to the kleronomia (heritage) of Light . . . called in the literal sense the word the Treasure of Light," C. Schmidt, in Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 365. In: Pastor Hermæ, I, Simil. iii:5; the saints are raised up by degrees, being tested at each step, to the precious tower.

J. Zandee, in Numan, 11 (1964), 45. Adam is the type of the initiate, Ep. Barnab., vi:11-16, from whom the mysteries have been handed down, Apocryphon of Adam, lxxxv:15ff. He was privy to the whole plan of creation, II Baruch, iv:12; Secrets of Enoch, xxx:13ff, being in the "Creation Hymn" (Gen. 1:36ff) "God's counterpart as a speaking, active, personal being," I. B. Bauer, in Theol. Zeitschr., 20:8, a historical, not a mythological, character, ib., 7. He "came forth out of the light of the invisible place . . ." Pseudo-Phil, xxviii:9, and received the first anointing, Creation Apocryphon, 159:3; Clementine Recognitions, i:47. It is "the light of Adam."
that leads men back to the Light, Psalms of Thomas, iv:9; and the faithful are promised "all the glory of Adam," IQS, iv: line 23; Zadokite Doc., iii:20. He is called "the son of the Treasuries of Radiance" in the Mandaeans Prayerbook, No. 579, 290.

60 On the sleep of forgetting, The Pearl, line 34; Psalms of Thomas, xv:5; Apocryphon of John, 58:15ff.; Apocryphon of Adam, 65:14-23; Abp. Timothy on Abboton, fol. 159b; Sophia Chr., 106:1-10; Creation Apocryphon, 158:25; Apocryphon of James, I xlviii, 24, 221; Hypostasis of the Archons, 137:1-5. It is the "Sem-sleep" of the Egyptian initiation rites. It is also expressed in terms suggesting Plato's Cup of Lethe. Manichaean Psalm-book, II, 7, 57, 117, and as the dropping of a veil, Sophia Chr., 120 (in Texte u. Unters., 602:280); Pistis Sophia, 131 (356-358); Ginza, 34; the Cup-of-Lethe plays an important role in the Greek mysteries, to a lesser extent the Cup of Memory is discussed by C. Schmidt, in Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 403ff.

61 Called "Three Great Men" in Apocryphon of Adam, 66:12ff., they are three arch-angels, Creation Apocryphon, 252:23; Sophia Chresti, 96:3ff.; and Gnastic Work, 109. They are sent down to instruct and accompany Adam, Ginza, 15, 33-35; they are the Three Uthras, "sent into the world to fetch the Elect... back to the House of Light," R. Bultmann, in ZNTW, 24 (1925), 132. Thus Enoch is fetched by three men in white, I Enoch, xc:31; who also visit Abraham, Genesis Apocryphon, ii:244; xiv:25ff.; xxii:1-8; xxii:14ff.; xxii:12ff. For the Jewish version of the Three Men in White, R. Goodenough, Jewish Symbols in the Greco-Roman Period (N.Y.; Panton 1956), IX, 102-4, 84-86; X, 92-96. Cf. J. Barbel, "Zur Engel-trinitätsetheorie im Urchristentum," in Theological Review, 54 (1953), 48-58, 103-112; K. Rudolph, Die Mandäer, I, 162, noting that these three were the arch-types of the Sent Ones in general.

62 Od. Sal., xxix:1ff.; xlii:2; Psalms of Thomas, vi:28; Gospel of Truth, fol. Xlii, 22; I Eue, 3; Epistle of the Apostles, xii:23; Berlin Marsh. HS., I, 56; not only Adam but every patriarch after him is instructed by a Sent One, Mand. Johannesbuch, Nos. 13, 14 (17ff) 60, n. 6. Indeed the Sent Ones are to help every mortal back "to the place from which he came," Ginza, 244; cf. IQS, vii:11; Luke 1:78-79 (John the Baptist as a Sent One). The Adversary also has his sent ones, Pistis Sophia, 66 (170).

63 Being rejected like the Poor, the Sent Ones may be identified with them, R. Bultmann, in ZNTW, 24 (1925), 124. The evil spirits accuse the Sent Ones of being aliens and meddlers in the earth, Ginza, 263ff., and accuse Adam and his descendants of the same thing. The Poor are the true heirs. 4QpPs 37: iii:20; Od. Sal., viili:6-23; see K. Romaniuk, in Aegyptus, 44 (1964), 85, 86, citing Old Testament and New Testament parallels to Egyptian teachings. Their "angels" have unbroken contact with the Father, Matt. xviii:10.

"The Sent One is the Treasure," C. Schmidt, in Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 349. The saints receive the Law "by angels" (lit. "sent ones"). Acts vii:52; each dispensation having its special angel, Pastor Hermæ, I, iii, 4, "There has come from the plains of heaven a blessed man... and he has restored to all the good wealth (treasure) which the former men took away," namely, the ordinances of the Temple, Sibyline Oracles, v:414-33. "Thou didst appoint from the beginning a Prince of Light to assist us," IQM, xiii:20. Enos, Enoch, Moses, and Joshua were such Sent Ones, Const. Apostol., viii:78, as John the Baptist, restoring lost ordinances and preparing the way for the one to come, John 1:15-16; Luke 1:18ff.; Heb. 1:14; cf. IQM, iv:12. Those who accept the Plan had a pure begetting through the First Sent One, Sophia Chr., 82-122. Like Adam, everyone is awakened from the sleep of forgetfulness by a Sent One, ib., 94:5ff. Angels and prophets are sent to bring men "what is theirs," Gospel of Thomas, 96-7, instructing them in the mysteries, Mysteries of Heaven and Earth, iv:1, in Migne, P. O., VI, 428; Bodmer Papyrus X:33. Adam himself became a Sent One to help his children, Psalms of Thomas, vi:6-8; iv:2-10, 13-17, and his two counsellors to the Sent One and Adam and his posterity what they must know and do to return to the Light, Ginza, 16, 17, 18, 41, 57ff., 113 (on the teaching of ordinances), 119; for the Sent One is the special charge of the Treasure of Life in this world and the other, ib., 96.

64 It was by a "letter of command from the Father" that "the Son of Truth inherited and took possession of everything," Od. Sal., xxiii:25-17; The Pearl, lines 35-59, 55ff., 50. The "King's Letter" is one's passport to heaven, The 1022 Questions, 198. As a knowledge of the ordinances, the Treasure is an actual scroll, written by the hand of the Lord of Greatness, Alma Rishia Zuta, 72. Writing is one of the Ten Treasures of the Creation, Pesachim, fol. 54a. The heavenly books are "Beweisdokumente." L. Koep, Das himmlische Buch... (Bonn: Hanstein, 1952), 54-61; e.g., The Book of Deeds is a written contract between Christ and Adam, ib., 64. "Thou hast engraved them on the Tablets of Life for kingship..." IQM, xiii:3, discussed by F. Notscher, in Revue de Qumran, 3 (1959), 405-12. For the Mandaeans the holy books are heavenly treasures, E. Drower, The 1022 Questions, 158ff., 170, 252. The holy books were often literally treasures, being inscribed on precious metals and buried in the earth like other treasures, H. Nibley, "Qumran and the Companions of the Cave," Revue de Qumran, 5 (1965), 19ff. The idea of books as treasures is a natural one. "The treasures of the wise men of old are the books they have left us," Xenophon, Memorab., I, vi. 14.

69We have given some examples in "Christian Envoy of the Temple," Jewish Quarterly Review, 50 (1959), 27ff.; reprinted in When the Lights Went Out (Salt Lake City: Deseret, 1970), 54ff.

70J. B. Frey, in Biblica, 15 (1932), 164.

71For the first formula, M. R. James, Biblical Antiquities of Philo, 56, 44. Luther called the second "locus vaxatissimus," and indeed it "makes impossible a spiritual interpretation" of the kerygma, M. H. Scharlemann, in Concordia Theological Monthly, 37 (1956), 86, 89.

72Quotation from J. Frankowski, in Verbum Domini, 43 (1965), 149. See also below, notes 91, 96, 97.

73Pistis Sophia, 185, 186, 186; on the basic materials, id. 247-48.

74In the Genesis Apocryphon, II 4, Abraham and Sarah swear by "the King of all the Worlds," (cf. the common Moslem expressions); God made the "worlds," Od. Sal., 10; xii 16; xii 14, 8; all the worlds worship the Sent One as "Illuminator of their worlds," ib., xii 12; 50, Psalms of Thomas, vii 13, 6ff; The 1012 Questions, 112; "other worlds" have been going on forever, Gospel of Philip, 106:186. God "arranged all the kosmos in his glory," Apocryphon of John, xxi-xvii; the worlds assemble before him, Psalms of Thomas, vii 13. The angel who came to Isaiah was "of another firmament an another world," Ascension of Isaiah, vii 3. The Adversary opposed the plan of God "to create another world" and put Adam in charge, Secrets of Enoch, xxi 13. A Logion depicts the saints hereafter moving freely through space among the spheres, Logia et apographa, No. 127, in Migne, P.O., XIX: 547; cf. II Baruch, xliii 9. The Father is in the worlds (kosmos) and the Son is first and highest among those worlds (en toisde tois kosmois) according to an early Liturgy, in Migne, P.O., XVIII: 445f., 448. Each heaven is completely equipped with thrones, dwellings, temples, etc., and there are many such heavens, Creation Apocryphon, 150:186f., 23-25. The Archon Jadaboth created beautiful heavens for his sons, ib., 350ff.; Hypostasis of the Archons, 144:5-10, furnished with stolen materials, above, note 39.

75Ascension of Isaiah, x 132; Creation Apocryphon, 148:296f; Ginza, 80, they say, "There is only one world—ours!"

76Od. Sal., xii 3, 10; xvi 11-16; Gospel of Truth, fol. XIVr, 11-16; Apocryphon of John, xvi 12f.; xii 12f.; I Enoch, ii 4; xlii 13; II Baruch, xliii 9; Epist. I Clement, xx. When God created this world, all the other worlds rejoiced together, and Gnostic Work, 478. The worlds borrow light from each other and exchange all they know, Ginza, 10-11; they form a single lively community, Mand. Prayerbook, No. 379, 303, 288-99, all the mysteries being "shared out amongst the worlds of light," The 1012 Questions, 112, 124. In a pinch the 'Treasures' help each other out, Psalms of Thomas, xii 25.

77Quotation is from the Mand. Johannesbuchs, No. 59, 207. So also Od. Sal., xii 14-9; The 1012 Questions, 215; Mand. Prayerbook, No. 379, 296. This seems to be an Eastern tradition, the others being more concerned with emissaries and messenger; see the following notes.

78and Gnostic Work, 45a. Cf. Manichaean Psalm-book, II, 23, 66. On his visits each world implores him to stay, "and be our King and bring peace to our city!" (I.e., Ginza, 258)—i.e. it is a true Parousia, Psalms of Thomas, vii 1-15f.; cf. John x 12:16.

79Two hundred angels act as interplanetary messengers, Secrets of Enoc, iv 1. The business of the angels is to coordinate the working of the central plan among the worlds, F. Dieterici, Thier und Mensch vor dem Koenig der Genien (Leipzig, 1881), 78f. The heavenly bodies receive commands from a single center, M. R. James, Biblical Antiquities of Philo, 45, the highest heaven being the "indispensable exchange-center between the spheres," K. Koch, in Zeitschr. f. Theol. u. Kirche, 62 (1965), 275; the affairs of "the incomprehensible expanse of the universe of heaven," are directed from a command-post in the center, Creation Apocryphon, 140:15-20. The rulers dispatch "letters from world to world and reveal the truth to each other, and there are some souls that travel like an arrow and cleave through all the worlds," The 1012 Questions, 192, cf. 164. Adakas "is a 'go-between' between the worlds," E. S. Drower, Mand. Prayerbook, 293, and Manda d-Haiai, called the "Capable" by his brother 'uthras, is called to "regulate and to station the 'uthras in their places" among the worlds, ib., 294. In the beginning of the Apocalypse of Paul, i 1f., Paul is ordered "to go down and speak to the planet earth," (le alma darga). Visitors to celestial regions in the various Testaments (Abraham, Isaac, Isaiah, the XII Patriarchs, Adam, etc.) report a traffic of chariots in the spaces, e.g., I Enoch, lxvii 8. By whatever means, they circulate ceaselessly among the worlds with marvellous ease, Ginza, 37, 42. The Mandaean faithful are urged to "be informed about all worlds" as far as possible, 1012 Questions, 289. The worlds of darkness also communicate, but on another level, Berlin Manich. Hz. I, 32.
94 / Dialogue

17Ben Sira, xii:23-5; Od. Sal., xii:9; "... each is more wonderful than the other!" Ginza, 11-15; so also Mand. Johannesbucb, No. 59, 207, explaining that it is "the power of the Treasure" that makes such rich variety possible. Among ten-thousand times ten-thousand worlds "every world is different from the others," Ginza, 152. Even the worlds of darkness are all different. Berlin Manich. Hs., I, 68. One cannot describe how another world differs entirely from every other, Pistis Sophia, Ch. 88 (199); no other world can be described in terms of this one, so different are they all (84, 133).

18Wisdom of Solomon, xix:18. On the letters of the alphabet as elements of creation, see Sefer Yeshira, texts by P. Mordell, in JQR, N.S. III (1913), 536-44.

19The Creation is compared to the smashing of inferior vessels to use their substance for better ones, Gospel of Truth, fol. XLI., 23ff.; or the melting down of scrap-metal for re-use, Manichaean Psalm-book, II. 31; or with the breaking of an egg that a more perfect form might emerge, Clementine Recognitions, iii. 27-30; cf. The 1022 Questions, 185; the Ginza, 83ff. God sparks some worlds from dismantling until they have fulfilled their purpose, Psalms of Thomas, ii.50-31. While treasure-ships carry matter through space (above, note 58), the Seven Planets "intercept all the goods bestowed by the constellations and divert them to the use of the demons" in furnishing out their worlds, D. Winston, History of Religions, 5 (1966), 29ff.; the fullest treatment in Berlin Manich. Hs., I, 109, 111-14, 177; where it is even necessary to determine the over-materials before re-using them, ib., 133-134; 350. Pistis Sophia, 56ff.

20ib., 22ff.

21ib., 146.

22ib., 20-36, citing many sources. It is the business of the Demiurge to organize rather than to produce out of nothing, ib., 44ff.

23The 1022 Questions, 164. "There is abundant room in thy Paradise, and nothing is useless therein..." Od. Sal., xi:20. There is a remarkable picture of the struggle for survival, however, when life began in the waters: "... they attacked one another and slew one another, saying to one another: Move off out of my way... Move on that I may come!" The 1022 Questions, 184.

24The 1022 Questions, 111; Gospel of Philip, 104:28ff.; the physis itself is "imperishable, complete, and boundless," Creation Apocryphon, 146:11.

27Worlds come and go, only progeny (sonship) is eternal, Gospel of Philip, 123:6-10: "The man of heaven, many are his Sons, more than the man of earth. If the Sons of Adam are many but still die, how much more the Sons of the perfect man, who they do not die but are begotten at all times," ib., 106:17. "Mounting up from world to world" is from The 1022 Questions, 192, and "towards His perfection" from the Gospel of Truth, fol. XXV, 4-14. The ultimate objective is to receive the same glory which the Son received from the Father in the beginning, John xvii:22; the Epistle to Diognetus, x, tells us not to marvel at this—man must become the heir of divinity in the fullest sense, C. Schmidt, in Texte u. Unters., 8 (1802), 33ff.; Gospel of Philip, 100:18, 21; 101:1ff; Psalms of Solomon, 1:5-4. It is important not to get stuck "in the middle" and so delay progress, Schmidt, op. cit., 335, this world being merely a bridge, according to the famous Logion (Migne, P.O., XIII, No. 75). The fundamental nature of Godhead is to beget and create, Sophia Christi, 87:12-88:1.

28C. Thausing, in Mitt. dl. Inst. Kairo, VIII (1939), 63-64.

29This is the ametretos bathos in which a sector is staked out for a new creation, and Gnostic Work, 9a. Pahil-Uthra is ordered: "Go down to a place where there are no Shkinas (dwellings) and no other worlds, and make thee a world as the Sons of Salvation do..." Ginza, 98. God plans for the occupancy of all the "spaces" ahead of time, Gospel of Truth, fol. XIVv, 12-16. One seeks release by moving "from the more confined to the more spacious places," Pistis Sophia, 47 (85). The role of space in creation is vividly depicted in Egyptian temple-founding rites, in which the King, representing God creating the world, takes sightings on a star in a pure and empty place, A. Moret, Du caractere religieux de la royauté pharaonique (Paris, 1902), 350-42; R. T. R. Clark, Myth and Symbol in Ancient Egypt (London: Thames, 1959), 80. Preparing for the Creation of the world, "Marduk went into the heavens, inspecting the places, and there he established a new one, an exact replica... of the dwelling of Ea," Enuma Elish, iv:42.
"Space and time are the plan of the world-system . . . ," G. S. Fullerton, in Philosophical Review, 10 (1910), 595.

98The work begins with hyle, C. Schmidt, Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 365, 372, although "We do not know whether Hyle was already present in the Treasury of Light or not," there was a "kerasmos in which Light and Matter are mixed in various proportions," ib., 373. "Kenaz" in the Visio Kenaz (M. R. James, Apocr. Anecdota, II, No. 3 [Cambridge, 1895], 278-79) sees "flames that do not consume and fountains stirring into life," amid a vague substance taking form at the Creation. Those who were with God "before his works of old" are later "to inherit substance, and fill their treasures," Proverbs viii:19-22, referring perhaps to a new, material, phase of creation—see above, notes 80-84.

99It is well for men not to contemplate the bathos too intently, Gospel of Truth, fol. XIXr, 86; 1 Enoch, frgs. in R. H. Charles, The Book of Enoch (Oxford, 1912), 207; Evang. Barthol., Frg. iii, in Revue Biblique, 30 (1921), 326. Matter having no fixity or stability," is repellant, Gospel of Truth, fol. XIIIv, 15ff; Pistis Sophia, 59 (63). Apocal. of Abraham, 16-17. Sophia’s first advice to her son was, "Get a foothold, O youth, in these places!" Creation Apocryphon, 148:12; 149:6. The foothold idea may have inspired the ubiquituous image of the "Rock," e.g., IQS, xi:5; R. Eisler, Jessous Basileus . . . (Heidelberg, 1930), II, 266. Preparing for the Creation, Marduk, having found his space, established the stations (fixed points of reference) beside the star Nibiru, firmly bolted on the left and on the right, Enuma Elish, v:8-10.

99& Gnostic Work, 28-35; 18A. The fundamentum of a world begins to take form when touched by a scintilla, but "the spark ceases and the fountain is stopped" when the inhabitants transgress, Visio Kenaz, I. Matter without Light is inert and helpless, Pistis Sophia, 55 (107); Berlin Manich. Ha., I, 170; it is the "first light" which reproduces "the pattern of the heavenly model" wherever it touches, Creation Apocryphon, 146:20. For "rays from the worlds of light stream down to the earthly world," for the awakening of mortals, "The 1012 Questions, 1961; sometimes a column of light joins earth to heaven, 2ynax, Arab., in Migne, P.O., XI 754, even as the divine plan is communicated to distant worlds by a spark, and Gnostic Work, 290-301; it is the "dynamis of Light" that animates one world from another, C. Schmidt, Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 331. God’s assistants, "the faithful servants of Melchizedek," rescue and preserve the light particles lest any be lost in space, Schmidt, Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 404, cf. and Gnostic Work. The spark is also called a "drop," Sophia Christi, 204:7ff.; it is "the divine drop of light than bas been snatched away from him above," ib., 230:12ff. The Spark can re-activate bodies that have become inert by the loss of former light, Pistis Sophia, 65 (154). It is like a tiny bit of God himself, "die kleine Idee," Schmidt, Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 396; I. Jeur, 7; H. Zandee, in Numen, 11 (1964), 67. Thus Christ calls upon the Father, addressing him as "Sphinther," to send light to the Apostles, Pistis Sophia, 170 (35). This light comes from the Treasury, Berlin Manich. Ha., I, 44.

99C. Schmidt, op. cit., 335. Knowledge of the divine plan is communicated to the worlds by a spark, and Gnostic Work, 290-301; the Father "let an idea come out of His Treasury . . . ." I. Jeur, 7; 8, as the "Son of Radiance" is sent forth to enlighten the worlds, Psalms of Thomas, viii: 12; such an ambassador is himself a "treasure-chamber of Life . . . ." ib., iii:28. All the mysteries are "shared out" among 350 Worlds of Light "as they emanate from that Supreme Celestial world," The 1012 Questions, 112. God is "pure radiance, a precious Treasure of Light, the Intelligence which correcteth the hearts of all our kings!" ib. 123. The "Emanation" (probole) is a sharing of treasures, so that "das Lichtschatz ist also der Gipfelpunkt des Universums," Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 325, 266. "The spark radiates and scatters to every Place," Ginz, 7; The Power of the Light, radiating into surrounding Chaos, produces a higher type of topos wherever it goes, Pistis Sophia, 58 (112), the creation process being the adding of Light and its power to dark chaotic matter, ib., 50 (94), 48 (85ff.), 50 (90). Every phōsiter goes back to the same Root, Manichaean Psalms-book, II, 20, 138.

99An important part of God’s plan is the providing of a proper topos for the saints, Pastor Hermæ, III, Simil. v:6. Each topos awaiting occupants is the result of the diffusion of the Treasure of the I. Jeur, 11. For "there has previously been prepared a topos for every soul of man," 1012 Questions, xliii:2; biv:6ff., "mansions without number," ib., 2. The work of Jesus was to collect the treasures of the Father into one blessed topos of meeting, Acts of Thomas, xlviii. While the Elect have their mansions, I. Enoch, xlii:9-9, there are special places set apart for spirits in transition, ib., xxii: 3, 9. For each specific group yet to be born a place has been prepared, II Baruch, xxviii:4. The earthly and heavenly hosts alike have their assigned places, IQM, xii: 1-2. There is an assigned place of glory for each hereafter, Epist. I Clem., v: 6; Polycarp, Epist. ad Phil., xi: Apocryphon of Adam, 69:2ff.; everyone should know to what topos he has been called and live accordingly, Epist. II Clem., 1; v: Ignatius, ad Magnes., v; Polycarp, op. cit., xi; Oxyrhynchus Frg., No. 654:22. No one gets a topos without earning it, Ignatius, *ad Smyrn., vi; Pastor Hermæ, III, Simil. viii. 3, 5, 8; Apocryphon of Elias, vi. 66 ff. The topoi of the angels greatly interested the early saints, Ignatius, *ad Traianum., v.

"The central topos is the Treasury of the true God, C. Schmidt, *Texte u. Unterschr., 8 (1892), 357; it is "the topos from which all aërons and all cosmoses take their pattern and their origin." *Sophia Christi, 126 (in *Texte u. Unterschr., 60, 256 ff.). It is "the self-produced and self-begotten topos" from which all others are derived, *2nd Gnostic Work, 11; it is called "the God-bearing" topos, or "land of the begetting of gods," ib., 224. The Egyptians regarded the "dwelling of the World as an Ethereal Cosmogony " . . ." W. Richer, in *Biblische Zeitschr., NS, 10 (1906), 101 ff. The colonization is always a family affair: God wants "all of those he raised up for Himself" to "fill the face of the universe with their seed . . ." Zadokite Doc., ii. 10. The inhabitants are the progeny or seed of those who sent them, *1 Enoch, xxxix. 13; *The 2012 Questions, 118, 170 ff.; *Sophia Christi, 88-75 ff.; *Apocryphon of James, 1: 43-5 ff.; called "chosen seed, or seed of promise . . ." J. Zandre, in *Numen, 11 (1964), 45 ff., 72 ff. When "the elect . . . descend from heaven . . . their seed will become one with the children of man," *1 Enoch, xxxix. 13. Simat-Hila, the primordial Eve is "mother of all kings, from whom all worlds proceeded," *Alma Rishaiha Rba, vi. 58 ff. (29). A colonizing activity is described in *Pistis Sophia, 260 ff., 234-234 (146). Lactantius presents the idea of real seeds floating around in space, *Div. Inst., III, xvii.

"Planting" can here mean create, beget, establish or assist, i.e., it is the proper work of the "Sons of the Living One," according to C. Lidzbarski, *Mand. Johannesbuch., 60, 66, and *Berlin Manich., Hs. I, 535. Eden was God's planting on earth, W. Richer, *Biblische Zeitschr., NF, 10 (1906), 101 ff. "I said that the world should be . . . (saying) I will plant a great vineyard, and out of it I will choose a plant," i.e. the Chosen People, *Pseudo-Philo, xxviii. 14; the Qumran community calls itself a planting, *IQS, viii. 5, 20-21, 22-25, as does the Early Church, *1 Euseb., ad fin. 15. God's "planting in the world of men" includes providing necessary physical substances, *Psalms of Thomas, iii. 13, 35, and the "planting" of light in a place of darkness, ib., vii. 17. God before the world existed planted the earth and then planted the Garden in it, 4 *Esdras 3:14; 6: He is the "Greatest of Gardeners," "the Planter" par excellence, H. F. Weiss, *Hellen. Juden., 10. Those who share in God's Plan are his "plants," *The 1012 Questions, 127, 140, 150, who in turn have their disciples or plants, ib., 230, 236 ff. The human race is Adam's "planting," *Mand. Prayerbook, No. 578, 285, 286; No. 386, 290. The Elect are "the plants that God has planted," and must plant their own plants through marriage, *Ginza, 61 ff. "The "planting of the earth is described as a colonizing enterprise in *Ginza, 335, 337; they move from place to place in winged wagons, looking for places to settle, ib., 337-40; the Planter is expected to provide the necessary Helpers for new settlers, ib., 404. Rituals, the planting is a *sparosio, a sowing or begetting of the race, H. Nibley, *Sparisones, *Classical Journal, 40 (1945), 513 ff.

On the "Treasure-house of Souls," see R. H. Charles, note on 4 *Ezra, iv. 55 (Apocrypha & Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament, II, 567); II Baruch, xxxii. 12; *Pseudo-Philo, xxvii. 13; C. Schmidt, in *Texte u. Unterschr., VIII, 1568. The souls of the righteous like the Treasure itself are beneath the throne of God, *Bab. Sabbath, fol. 152 b; cf. Rev. vii. 19. The "planting" of a world is always from the "House of Light, the shining Home," i.e., the Treasure-house, *Mand. Johannesbuch., No. 65, 228. It is "through the power of the Treasure" that "heavens of radiance" are created, "thrones of glory are established and Chiefs of worlds appointed," ib., No. 59, 207; the treasure being the source of everything within as well as between the worlds, ib., No. 57, 205 ff. Every world contains an existence in a sort of fiction from the Treasure of the Secret Mysteries, *Oxford Mand. Scroll, 535 ff. What Adam plants then grows and so increases his Treasure, *Mand. Prayerbook, 285. The bestowing of the "Treasure of the Mighty One" on men to test them is called a "planting of plants," in *Psalms of Thomas, xiii. 15-14; iii. 24-7; *Acts of Thomas, Ch. 10.

On the hierarchy of emansiations, Schmidt, *Texte u. Unterschr., 8 (1892), 367. In the system of *1 Enoch, 5-7, one put in charge of a new "topos" as "Chief" is a Jew, who then becomes the Father of "other emansiations to fill other toposes," each of which in turn becomes a "Father of Treasures"; in the end "myriads of myriads will go forth from them," ib., 6. Every Son begets sons, and these in turn consult in the making of "other worlds," *Ginza, 240; just so "a Jordan produces Jordans without number and without end—living waters," ib., 65-67. Through the power of the Treasure worlds are created, places made in habitable, "chiefs or worlds are appointed," so that the Treasures may be handed down from the older worlds to newer ones, *Mand. Johannesbuch., No. 59, 207. It is perhaps from his Manichaean experience that St. Augustine derives the image of sparks springing from a central fire, each becoming a focal center for more sparks, an idea conveyed in the *Berlin Manich. Hs., I, 555 ff.

Quotation from the *2nd Gnostic Work, 490. He who is begotten is expected to beget, Gen. 1:29, etc. In the Egyptian rites the First Born is commanded "to create men, to give birth to the gods, to create all that should exist," R. Reymond, in *Chroniques d'Egypte, 40 (1965).
61; the work of the Creation is repeated indefinitely and daily in ritual, H. Kees, in Aegypt. Zeitschr., 78 (1942), 48. One becomes a Son in order to become a Father; one receives in order to give, Gospel of Philip, 123:10-14. The Son is commanded, “Go, confirm kings, create new Jordans, and help Chosen Ones (to) arise with thee to the Father,” The 121 Questions, 123. The Sent Ones say to the Father, “O our Lord, Lord of all worlds, Thou didst command that we should create worlds and populate species!” and God informs them that that is the “Treasure bestowed only on ‘one who is our son (plant),’” ib. 137. All who behold the creative process have a normal desire to become creators themselves, Ginza, 67f., creation being the essence of godhood, see above, notes 8, 9, 14.

12The patriarchal line is never broken: “Let us, Father, create other worlds in order to raise to Thee a planting . . . ,” Ginza, 241. One does not create without the express permission of the “Creator of the Treasures,” ib., 67f. He who is “planted from above” does his own “pure planting” under the auspices of his Planter, Mand. Johannesbuch, No. 59, 207. Hence “all gloried in the knowledge that their Father had transplanted them from the House of Life,” Alma Rishpia Rba, 1; in the end, all come “into existence for his sake,” Mand. Johannesbuch, iv, 30-35, 70. Even to the greatest Sent Ones he is the “lofty King by Whom our Treasure ascends!” Alma Rishaia Zuta, 64f. At the Council in Heaven the Son was hailed as "the Father of those who believe," and Gnostic Work, 294-304; this identity of Father and Son and to and with believers is a basic teaching of the Fourth Gospel, R. Bultmann, in ZNW, 24 (1923), 122.

13The dwellers upon the earth can understand only what is upon the earth . . . “ and the same applies to other worlds, 4 Ezra, iv:21. Beings comprehend only what they are; the idea also is that the Lord must take the form of those to whom he appears, C. Schmidt, Kopt.-Gnost. Schrift., I, 141; Gospel of Philip, 101:27-36; 105:20-106:10; Ascension of Isaiah, vii:25; Pistis Sophia, 7 (12); cf. U. Bianchi, in Numen, 12 (1965), 165; Manichaean Psalms-book, II, 42.

14Gospel of Thomas, 95:20-23; I, 75; 54, cf. Gospel of Truth, fol. xv, 20-23; Exod. iii:6; Matt. xvii:5-6; Mark ix:5-6; E. L. Cherbonnier, in Harvard Theological Review, 55 (1962), 105-109. So also the Son, Gospel of Thomas, 87:27, whose “true name man is not able to hear at this time,” P. Thomas, III:14. He . . . is within the Veil, within his own shrine (dwell- ing, tabernacle), Mand. Prayerbook, No. 374, 167. His topos is completely out of our cosmos, being the ultimate Treasure, “the Treasure of the Outer Ones,” I, 47, 79; and Gnostic Work, 2a, surrounded by veils and guarded gates, C. Schmidt, Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 402; hence it is “beyond the veil, a place of shadowless light,” ib., 366; Sophia Christi, ix:126, “the great secret Dwelling of Light,” The 121 Questions, 165. By night all the outer worlds strain to see the Father . . . because of the invisibility that surrounds him,” and Gnostic Work, 5a, even as the angels yearn to see the ultimate place of the saints, L. Guerrier, in Patrolog. Or., IX, 235; cf. I Peter 1:12.

15Sophia Christi, ix:126; and Gnostic Work, 47a; Berlin Manich., I, 118; “the veil at first concealed how God controlled the creation,” Gospel of Philip, 152:123; there is a veil between us and the heavens, N. Sed, in Revue des Etudes Juives, 124 (1965), 39. All treasures are hidden treasures until God reveals them, Zadokite Doc., v:13; I Baruch, 11:7-8; Euang. Barthol., iii:2-7; Gospel of Thomas, 86:4, 24. “If you want to go to the Father you must pass through the veil,” I, 47, 79. God isolates hostile worlds from each other lest they unite against him, Ginza, 177. “As the doctrine of the body is hidden in its treasure-house, so God the Father is hidden in his Kingdom, invisible to the wastelands without,” Berlin Manich., I, 151.

16A. Pelletier, in Syria, 35 (1956), 225f.

17M. J. bin Gorion, Sagen der Juden (1913), I, 59.

19and Gnostic Work, 47a; Pistis Sophia, 317; in Texte u. Unters., 60:128.

20C. Schmidt, in Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 368.

21Hypostasis of the Archons, 143:12.

22Pistis Sophia, 366.

23Ibid., 42-44.

24Ibid., 23.

25I, 32; Pistis Sophia, 317-318.

26Pistis Sophia, 317.

27 Apocalypse of Baruch (3rd Bar.), VI, 5-6.

46ff., 519-21, 524f. Eternal progression is indicated in IQH, vii:15, and in the formula, "out of the eternities and into the eternities," IQS, iii:2; Epist. Barnab., xviii: "... press on from glory to glory," says a Hymn of Severus, in Migne, P.O., v:683; I Jew, 54f., 58f.; 2nd Gnostic Work, 54; Gospel of Thomas, 90:4f. "... a forward motion, and then a resting-time ... "). You master the places in this world so that you can master them in the next, Gospel of Philip, 124:5ff.; Gospel of Truth, fol. XIIr, 12-14, the ultimate object being to "share in the treasury of light as immortal gods," II Jew, 58. He who receives all the ordinances "cannot be held back in the way," Ginza, 19.

119This idea is forcibly expressed in the Pistoia Sophia, 88f. (189), 84 (185); Ginza, 14, 495-94.

120J. Soggin, in Theologische Literaturzeitung, 89 (1966), 729. Those who receive the Mysteries of the Gospel will also come to know the mysteries of the physical Cosmos, Pistoia Sophia, 223.

122The Schoolmen have always avoided "cosmism" and still do, H. F. Weir, Hell. Judaism, 75ff; Klaus Koch, Ratlos vor der Apokalyptik (Gütersloher Verlag, 1970) esp. 55ff.

123The contradictions are emphasized by S. A. Pallis, Mandaeana Studies, 1, 2, 4, 6, 188, and A. Brandt, Mandäische Religion, 48f., while the "einheitliche und organische Grundlage" is noted by K. Rudolph, Mandäer, I, 142, following H. Jonas. The Mandaean frequently refer to other sects, Jewish and Christian, as bitter rivals, not because of the differences but because of the gravity of their simultaneous claims between them, e.g. Ginza, 28-30, 48-51, 133, n.1, 233-34: Mand. Prayerbook, No. 377, 252; Berlin Manich. Hs., I, 21. While A. Loisy, Le Mandéisme et les Origines Chretiennes (Paris: Nourry, 1934), 142, maintains that "le Mandéisme n'est intelligible qu'en regard du chretianisme," M. Lidzbarski, Ginza, ix, insists that it is older than the captivity of 587 B.C. Such disagreements are typical.

124See K. Rudolph, Mandäer, I, 19-22, 36-42, 59ff., 112ff., 277-75, 251-54, seeing the common source in the early Taufsekten. Since the rites are "sinnlos und unerkärbar" without the peculiar doctrines (K. Rudolph, Mandäer, I, 254), the common rites indicate a common doctrinal tradd, E. Drower, Nasoraean Commentaries, vii.

125In their main points the two doctrines are in striking contrast, e.g. (1) The idea that all matter is evil heads the list of "orthodox" charges against the Gnostics, Bodmer Papyrus X:51:10: Const. Apostol., vi:10; C. Schmidt, Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 401f.; cf. Clementine Recognitions, iv:23: "... absolute dictum in substantia nihil esse malum." Cf. the Gnostic denial of a physical resurrection with the attitude of the Gospel of Philip, 135:9-19. (2) The Gnostic idea that Adam was "predisposed to evil" and that souls come to the earth to be punished is the opposite to that of man's preexistent glory, J. Zandee, Numen, 11 (1964), 51; Creation Apocryphon, 171:10ff.; Cyril of Jerusalem, Migne, P.G., XXXIII:481. (3) Gnostic dualism—between physical and non-physical states of being—is anti-cosmist, U. Bianchi, in Numen, 12 (1965), 165-66, 174, 177; S. Giverson, in Studia Theologica, 17 (1963), 62ff. (4) The Gnostics put God utterly beyond man's comprehension, not in the same family as the "Treasure" concept does, Bodmer Papyrus X:51:10: Const. Apostol., vi:10: Ignatius, Tract., incip., Israel means "man who is God," according to the Creation Apocryphon, 152:24: (5) Whereas the true Gnostic achieves complete spirituality on earth and goes directly to heaven (or the sun) at death, Schmidt, Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 521f.; Epist. to Rheginos, Puech in Vigiliae Christianae, 8 (1956), 44-46, the idea of a long and gradual progress of the soul is older than the Gnostics, K. Kohler, in Jewish Quarterly Review, viii:306; cf. IQS, ii:23ff; IQH, x:18. (6) Whereas pessimism is the hallmark of all Gnostic systems, in Numen, 12 (1965), 171; Bianchi, in Numen, 12 (1965), 165, the "Treasure" doctrine is completely optimistic and joyful. (7) The Gnostics show the influence of the schools, Bianchi, 162, while the other teaching is characteristic neither of the schools nor of religions in general, K. Koch, Zeitschr. f. Theol. u. Kirche, 62 (1965), 263. (8) Following the schools, Gnosticism shuns literalism and turns everything in abstraction and allegory: it is not a real system but poetic fantasy, C. Schmidt, Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 397, 413, 421-22; but "of mystical rapture there is no hint" in the other tradition, H. F. Owen, in New Testament Studies, 3 (1967), 351; Koch, loc. cit.

126C. Schmidt, Texte u. Unters., 8 (1892), 54ff.: there was nothing the Patristic Fathers combatted more vigorously than "the cosmist heresy." Having chosen the way of the Gnostics ad Neoplatonics, they condemned all literalism, ib., 421, and Texte u. Unters., XLIII:324-25.

127Tertullian and Irenaeus wavered between the two views, Schmidt, XLIII:526f. The fundamental "Treasure" doctrine of the descensus disappears after the 3rd century, F. Kattenbach, Das Apostolische Symbol (Leipzig, 1894), I, 104; II, 915f. The Epist. to Diognetus, vi, compromises, but for Athanasius, Basil, John Chrysostom, etc., heaven has become a state of mind pure and simple.
and God said:

\[
\frac{mv^2}{r} = \frac{Ze^2}{r^2}
\]

\[mv = \frac{nh}{2\pi}\]

\[r = \frac{r^2h^2}{12\pi mze^2}\]

\[E = \frac{\frac{1}{2}mvZe}{r}\]

\[E = \frac{2\pi^2h^2}{nh} = \text{Ry}'\] and there was:

\textit{Light}